ALL-STAR GAME NOTEBOOK

Historic night for Stanton

BY ANDRE C. FERNANDEZ
alfernandez@miamiherald.com

SAN DIEGO

That wasn't his primary reason for visiting San Diego this week.

"Taking the flight out here just for this, I figured it would have been a waste if I didn't bring this bad boy home," said Stanton as he clutched his brand new championship trophy.

Stanton, the first Marlin to win an All-Star Home Run Derby, accomplished his mission Monday night at Petco Park in historic fashion, blasting a record-setting 61 home runs in only his second appearance.

Stanton's final tally was the highest in the 31-year history of the event and broke the previous record for a single-event of 41 set by Bobby Abreu in 2005.

The impact from the show Stanton put on was still being felt on the eve of Tuesday's All-Star Game, which Stanton was not chosen to play in after a dismal start to this season. Stanton joined Yoenis Cespedes as the only Home Run Derby champions who did not play in that season's All-Star Game.

"I feel so excited for him and I'm proud of him because he was struggling [earlier this year] and for him to win it, it's beautiful man," said teammate Marcell Ozuna, who started in his first All-Star Game Tuesday. "He's one of the best home-run hitters in the big leagues."

By the end of the first round, after he crushed 24 homers (a single-round record), and eliminated 2011 champion Robinson Cano, Stanton was drawing reverence from the likes of David Ortiz, who is retiring after this season and played in his final All-Star Game Tuesday.

Stanton proceeded to hit 17 more in the second round to edge Mark Trumbo, who hit 14 and leads the majors with 28 home runs this season.

Stanton capped the day by hitting 20 more in the final round to dethrone defending champion Todd Frazier of the White Sox, who won it last year as a member of the Reds.

"[Stanton] was hitting the moonshots," said Frazier, who hit 13 in the matchup with Stanton and 42 overall, which surpassed his winning total of 39 in 2015.

"I felt like I was a high school hitter compared to him, the way he was hitting them that far."

SELFIE TIME

There was even time for Stanton to take a quick "selfie" with his Marlins teammates during a timeout.

"G said he wanted to do something different when we came out to give him some water," pitcher A.J. Ramos said. "I don't think I had ever seen someone take a selfie at home plate before."

Ramos and Jose Fernandez were among those having fun with Stanton during the performance. They waved towels to "cool him off" during timeouts and once Fernandez even playfully held a "shocked-face emoji" sign in front of his face.

MASSIVE STATS

Stanton's 61 home runs came on 120 swings and totaled a distance of 5.1 miles.

One of them had an exit speed of 120.4 mph, according to Statcast, making it the tracking system's highest speed on record for a home run. His longest home run was 497 feet, and he reached that distance twice, hitting five homers 490 feet or more and averaging 447 feet per home run.

Stanton hit the eight longest home runs of the contest and 20 of the 21 longest, and his total represented 30 percent of the 203 home runs hit overall.

Stanton said the timed format of four minutes per round with unlimited swings allowed definitely helped.

OZUNA GRATEFUL

Ozuna became the first Marlin to start an All-Star Game as an outfielder Tuesday night.

Ozuna, who hit seventh in the National League lineup, is the fourth Marlins player to start an All-Star Game, joining Gary love to add to that tally,” he said, “just as those guys would love to add to their one or two majors that they have and just keep going.”

Message received. McIlroy missed last year's British Open at St. Andrews after tearing a ligament in his left ankle playing soccer with his buddies, denying him a chance to defend the title he won in 2014.

“I guess it's the start of a new chapter for me in the Open championship,” he said. “I'm determined not to miss any more, for the foreseeable future anyway.”

He's even more eager to add another major title to his trophy case.

Two years ago, McIlroy followed up his victory at Royal Liverpool by winning again in the PGA Championship. He was the most dominant golfer in the game, the guy everyone else was chasing as Tiger Woods faded from view. But golf is a fickle game, and players such as Woods, who remain on top for years at a time, don't come along very often.

In 2015, Spieth surged to the pinnacle by winning the Masters and the U.S. Open, and just missing out on a playoff at St. Andrews. Before the year was out, Day had claimed his first major title at the PGA Championship, holding off Spieth.

Then, at this year's U.S. Open, it was Johnson's turn to shine. After some excruciating near-misses in the biggest events, he finally claimed his first major with a dazzling display at Oakmont.

“The game is in a great state,” said defending British Open champion Zach Johnson, one of only two players outside the Fab Four to win at the past eight major championships. “Great, young talents carrying it and pushing it.”

“I don't know if there's a ceiling, but if there is, it seems like it's being nudged a little bit higher month after month, year after year.”

Even though McIlroy hasn't been a serious contender at the majors since his victory at Valhalla, McIlroy sees no reason for concern. He's still only 27, an enormous talent who surely has some of his best golf still in front of him.

He rolled his eyes when someone mentioned a reference in the British media that he was on the verge of becoming the Ringo of the Fab Four.

“Probably the first time I've been compared to the Beatles,” he said, managing only the hint of a smile. “I'm happy where my game is. I can't worry about other guys.”

“If I focus on myself and make sure that I'm playing the best that I can, I'm pretty confident that ... I'm going to win more times than not.”

McIlroy has other things on his mind as well.

He called on golf's major governing bodies to step up their anti-doping efforts, which he said are limited to a handful of urine tests each year.

“I could use HGH and get away with it, so I think blood testing is something that needs to happen in golf just to make sure that it is a clean sport going forward,” he said. “If golf is in the Olympics and golf wants to be seen as a mainstream sport as such, it has to get in line with the other sports that test more rigorously.

Ahh, the Olympics.

So far, it has been the predominant story line in the buildup to the golf's oldest major championship, with Spieth announcing Monday he would follow the lead of McIlroy, Day and Johnson by not playing in Rio next month when the sport rejoins the Summer Games for the first time since 1904.

All of them cited concerns over the Zika virus as the primary reason for staying away. But, while Spieth said Tuesday it was “probably the hardest decision I've ever had to make in my life,” McIlroy was much more cavalier about skipping the Olympics.

“I don't think it was as difficult a decision for me as it was for him,” McIlroy said. “I don't feel like I've let the game down at all. I didn't get into golf to try and grow the game. I got into golf to win championships and win major championships.”

That was clearly a shot at golf's Olympic boosters, who have said it's the best way to spread the sport to nontraditional areas, with South America being at the forefront this year.

But McIlroy made it clear he's not in that camp. In fact, he made it sound as if golf doesn't belong in the Olympics at all.

“I'm very happy with the decision that I've made, and I have no regrets about it,” McIlroy said. “I'll probably watch the Olympics, but I'm not sure golf will be one of the events I watch.”

So, what will he watch? “Probably,” he replied, “the events like track and field, swimming, diving — the stuff that matters.”

Another zinger from a player who has no intention of fading away.
